Dekolta card cascade by Collectors' Workshop

The magician has had a playing card chosen and then points to his breast pocket. After all eyes are drawn to the pocket a fountain of cards spring forth from the pocket into the air and the chosen card however is the last one in the fountain and remains stationary protruding from the pocket!
Personally, I let all the cards fly out of the breast pocket and reached into the cards with my right hand to pull out the chosen card (card sword).

When this was produced the power source was a 6 volt battery by Polaroid that is no longer available.
I transformed it at the time with a simple battery housing that will accommodate four AAA batteries to power the unit.
For a handy DIY person, it should be a piece of cake to add a remote module to it.

Apparently very few were made at the time, because inquiries on forums yielded nothing. Very rare and works perfectly.

https://www.quickerthantheeye.com/p/cards-70/The_DeKolta_Card_Fountain-12788